investment, the AIPEX’s CEO Arlindo das Chagas Rangel has said.

Speaking to ANGOP about AIPEX’s participation in a training seminar in Lisbon (Portugal), Rangel highlighted the exchange of experiences with the Portuguese Agency for Investment and Foreign Trade (AICEP), adding that it contributes to the transformation of projects and serves as a model for cooperation.

Rangel said there was dialogue and technical assistance to better serve the Angolan business community, opening up opportunities for international partnerships, particularly in the European market.

Technicians from the Angolan Private Investment and Export Promotion Agency (AIPEX) are taking part in a training seminar in Lisbon on “best international practices for preparing and organizing business missions,” with the aim of strengthening skills in foreign direct investment.

The training is also aimed at the internationalization of national companies and the promotion of exports.

The program has funding and technical assistance from the “European Union – Angola
